PROJECTS

Backend - TripTrove

TripTrove is a travel-focused website developed using Node.js for backend and database management. I was in charge of building and handling the backend of the application, including server-side logic, database integration, and CRUD operations. Through this project, I gained hands-on experience in structuring APIs, managing data flow, handling user requests, and understanding how backend systems support a responsive and user-friendly web experience.

Design - PLEV wordpress website (ongoing)

PLEV is an ongoing WordPress website project for an independent local streetwear clothing brand. I am managing the overall project while designing and developing the site to showcase the brand's identity, products, and visual style. The project also involves applying and implementing my learnings in SEO, including content structure, on-page optimization, and performance considerations, alongside theme customization, responsive design, and brand consistency.

EXPERIENCE

2024, September - Present

Production - The Access Point

Student journalist and production team member responsible for covering IT-related events through on-site documentation and photography. Captures high-quality photos, assists in content production, and supports event coverage by documenting activities, speakers, and key moments for publication and digital media use.
